

GOOD for you.

My husband, Jason, was a wonderful man whose enthusiasm for life was inspirational. We loved each other very much. He made me laugh all the time. I think I miss the laughter most of all. Our daughter, Caeli Rose, was the apple of her daddy's eye and she still talks about him constantly. Jason was a wonderful husband, daddy, brother, son and friend, and he loved being with his family and friends. Jason was struck by lightning at a wake boarding competition he and his brother had started years ago. When he died, I was approached about Jason being a donor. I said yes immediately. I'm an RN and Jason and I had talked about it many times, and we were both donors. He told me that when he died, if anything he had could help even one person, he wanted to be a donor. He touched us all in his life, and we know he has touched many others by being a donor.
